

many interesting organic remains ; and he may be so fortunate as to meet with some rare fossils, and perhaps with one or two that have not previously been discovered ; for there is always a chance of finding relics hitherto unknown, even in a cliff or quarry that is daily visited by collectors. And as an old sportsman desirous of inspiring a novice with a love of field sports, takes him at first to preserves where game is plentiful, in like manner I would initiate my reader in the delightful pursuit of collecting the “ Medals of Creation,” by conducting him to a spot where these antiquities of nature are scattered about in great profusion and variety.