

in most cases spoken very ill. — English Type of Person. — Attend a Puseyite Chapel. — Puseyism a feeble Imitation of Popery. — Popish Cathedral. — Popery the true Resting-place of the Puseyite. — Sketch of the Rise and Progress of the Puseyite Principle ; its purposed Object not attained ; Hostility to Science. — English Funerals. . . . 252

CHAPTER XIV.

Drive from Birmingham to Stratford rather tame. — Ancient Building in a modern-looking Street ; of rude and humble Appearance. — “ The Immortal Shakspeare born in this House.” — Description of the Interior. — The Walls and Ceiling covered with Names. — Albums. — Shakspeare, Scott, Dickens ; greatly different in their Intellectual Stature, but yet all of one Family. — Principle by which to take their Measure. — No Dramatist ever draws an Intellect taller than his own. — Imitative Faculty. — The Reports of Dickens. — Learning of Shakspeare. — New Place. — The Rev. Francis Gastrall. — Stratford Church. — The Poet's Grave ; his Bust ; far superior to the idealized Representations. — The Avon. — The Jubilee, and Cowper's Description of it. — The true Hero Worship. — Quit Stratford for Olney. — Get into bad Company by the way. — Gentlemen of the Fancy. — Adventure. 276

CHAPTER XV.

Cowper ; his singular Magnanimity of Character ; Argument furnished by his latter Religious History against the Selfish Philosophy. — Valley of the Ouse. — Approach to Olney. — Appearance of the Town. — Cowper's House ; Parlor ; Garden. — Pippin-tree planted by the Poet. — Summer-house written within and without. — John Tawell. — Delightful Old Woman. — Weston-Underwood. — Thomas Scott's House. — The Park of the Throckmortons. — Walk described in “ The Task.” — Wil-