

acter of Immense Range ; more in Extremes than those of the Scotch. — Front Rank of British Intellect in which there stands no Scotchman ; probable Cause. — A Class of English, on the other Hand, greatly lower than the Scotch ; naturally less Curious ; acquire, in Consequence, less of the Developing Pabulum. — The main Cause of the Difference to be found, however, in the very dissimilar Religious Character of the two Countries. — The Scot naturally less independent than the Englishman ; strengthened, however, where his Character most needs Strength, by his Religion. — The Independence of the Englishman subjected at the present Time to two distinct Adverse Influences, — the Modern Poor Law and the Tenant-at-will System. — Walsall. — Liverpool. — Sort of Lodging-houses in which one is sure to meet many Dissenters. . . . 389

CHAPTER XX.

Dissent a Mid-formation Organism in England. — Church of Englandism strong among the Upper and Lower Classes : its Peculiar Principle of Strength among the Lower ; among the Upper. — The Church of England one of the strongest Institutions of the Country. — Puseyism, however, a Canker-worm at its Root ; Partial Success of the Principle. — The Type of English Dissent essentially different from that of Scotland ; the Causes of the Difference deep in the Diverse Character of the two Peoples. — Insulated Character of the Englishman productive of Independency. — Adhesive Character of the Scotch productive of Presbyterianism. — Attempts to legislate for the Scotch in Church Matters on an English Principle always unfortunate. — Erastianism ; essentially a different thing to the English Churchman from what it is to the Scot. — Reason why. — Independent Scotch Congregation in a Rural District. — Rarely well based ; and why. — Conclusion. . 407
