

the Bay of Fundy in Nova Scotia. The mass of sandstone containing the stems is 2,500 feet thick, and the length of the upright trunks six or eight feet. Only ninety-two feet of the beds is represented.

Fig. 239.

Calamites.

Fig. 240.

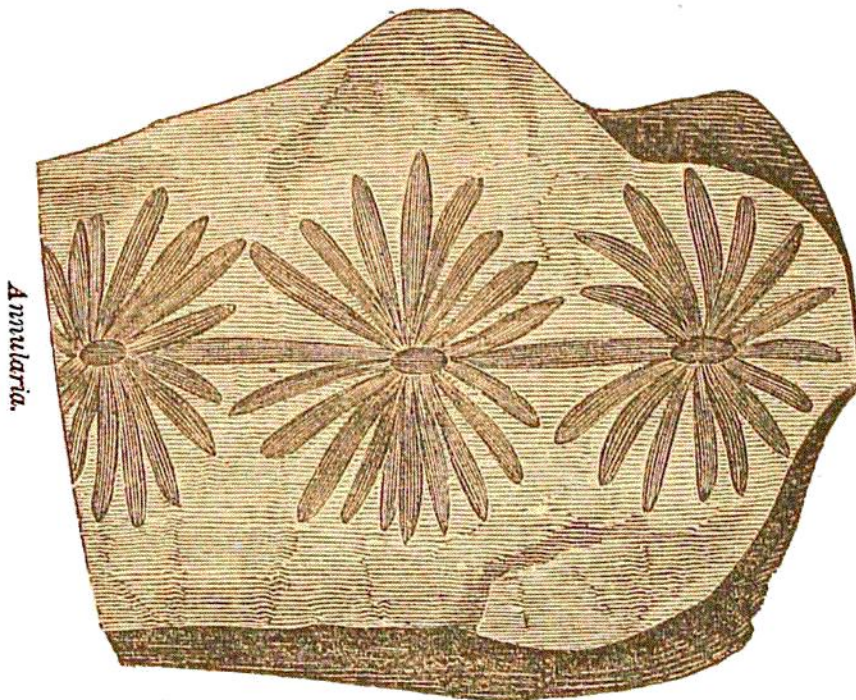

Fig. 241.

Annularia.

Asterophyllitææ.—These plants belong to the Acrogens, but have the aspect of aster flowers, and hence the name of the family. They were not numerous, but quite peculiar. Fig. 241, exhibits a species of Annularia. Fig. 242 shows the Sphenophyllum emarginatum, another genus of these plants.